Santa Fe County Master Gardener Impact Reports for 2015

New Mexico Master Gardeners assist their local Cooperative Extension Service office in providing accurate, research-based gardening information to county residents.

The Santa Fe County Master Gardener Association (SFMGA) consists of 140 volunteers, all of whom have completed 48 hours of classroom instruction and a minimum 30 hours of volunteer work per year. In 2014, SFMGA provided over 9,200 hours of volunteer service in the form of education, outreach and community service. According to the Independent Sector's national value of volunteer time ($23.07), this equates to $212,244.00.

Through the work of the SFMGA residents of Santa Fe County are learning concepts in reduction of water use through appropriate plant selection, water harvesting and efficient drip irrigation systems; reduction in household waste through composting techniques; and producing nutritious food for personal consumption. These types of learning experiences support the county's Sustainable Growth Management Plan; implementation of the concepts learned by participants lead to a decrease in the amount of water use, waste in landfills, and addresses food security issues.
